

Guidelines regarding children and play dates

The Danish National Health Service's recommendations for parents on children playing in groups:

Make sure that none of the children have symptoms of illness.

Play with as few children as possible (1-2), and for as little time as possible.

Stick to playing with the same few children, i.e. don't rotate play buddies each day.

Preferably play outside.
This will minimize the risk for spread of infection and makes keeping a distance easier.

Avoid playgrounds already occupied by a lot of children.

Make sure the children wash their hands often and thoroughly. Help younger children.
